William Morris (Camphill) Community Ltd.

RACE EQUALITY DUTY

In keeping with the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000, the College believes that it has a duty to uphold the ongoing statutory requirements and to meet the requirements of the Learning and Skills Council and other external agencies. These include the Commission for Racial Equality the Commission for Equality and Human Rights and local Race Equality Councils. The College pledges itself to the implementation of the ethos and rationale of the aforementioned Act, and is committed to working in a dedicated manner to achieve compliance.

To realise compliance with these principles the College takes proactive measures to prevent unlawful racial discrimination. Simultaneously, the College promotes equality of opportunity and promotes good race relations. The relationship is promoted between all different racial groups, and at every level of recruitment and admission.
